BODY OF ALBANY MAN FOUND IN RIVER MON.

The body of Robert Hill, 50, formerly of Albany, was found in the Androscoggin near the mouth of Alder River Monday afternoon by a group of children who were looking for a boat. Evidently the body had been in the water several weeks. He was last seen in town about the middle of last month.

An investigation conducted by Deputy Sheriff Frank Hunt led to Mr. Hill's identification, which was confirmed Wednesday afternoon by his daughter, Mrs. Winfield Whitman of Bethel, who recognized his writing in a diary and his pocket-book.

The discovery of the body was made by Ivory Currier, Richard Douglass, Leland Brown and Dorothy Garrison.

BETHEL FOLDERS AVAILABLE—INFORMATION BOOTH FOR SERVICE TO EVERYBODY

All persons wishing copies of the new edition of folders advertising the information on Railroad Street the town may obtain the same at or at the office of the Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, Gerard S. Williams. This applies especially to all who have accommodations for tourists, as visitors in this locality are usually interested in receiving this literature and sending copies to their friends. It is believed that this method of distribution is perhaps the most effective in results.

The information booth is open for the benefit and convenience of all. For mutual advantage it would be well for all having service to offer the travelling public to contact the booth, telephone 31-2.

MINORS UNDER 18 CANNOT WORK IN SAWMILLS AFTER THIS MONTH

Employment of minors under 18 years of age in Maine's vast logging industry and in occupations in any sawmill, lath mill, shingle mill or cooperage stock mill, with certain exceptions, and in occupations involved in the operation of power driven woodworking machines, will be prohibited on and after August 1. This announcement was made today by William P. Shannon, senior inspector of the Wage and Hour Division, U. S. Department of Labor.

In making the announcement Mr. Shannon said that orders number 4 and 5 prohibiting such employment have been signed by the Chief of the Children's Bureau, United States Department of Labor, as provided in the Fair Labor Standards Act. This Act in effect establishes a minimum of 18 years for occupations which are found and by order declared by the Chief of the Children's Bureau to be particularly hazardous or detrimental to the health and well being of young workers. Information concerning the excepted occupations may be had on application to the Children's Bureau.

The Fair Labor Standards Act also prohibits the employment of children under 16 years in establishments manufacturing goods for shipment in interstate commerce.

LAC W. ASHBY TIBBETTS

"The soaring mind outstripped the tethered heart."

Yet here was one who had no need to die

To be remembered... Oh dazzling dead

How like a comet through the darkening sky
You raced! ... would your return were heralded."

Sorrow came to the community of Bethel on last Friday with the death of Leading Air Craftsman W. Ashby Tibbetts in an airplane crash at the R.C.A.F. Training Station at Dunnville, Ontario. Ashby enlisted in the R.C.A.F. in December, 1940, and was to have received his Wings within ten weeks. Throughout his training, he showed great aptitude for flying; he was the second in his class to solo and second to pass the fifty hour test. His commanding officers found him exceptionally alert and able and had recommended him for a commission at the end of his course.

Ashby will be remembered for his welcoming manner, friendly ways and soaring spirit. His was an exuberant, untrammelled nature ever seeking something new, something adventuresome. Routine smothered him, and restless under any restraint, he always sought a challenge, when once he had mastered what had previously evaded him, his attention always shifted, and he sought new fields. Such is the nature of those free buoyant spirits who are ever young. In the Service in which he gave his life, Ashby found the hazard and danger which he loved and which for him meant happiness. Each day that dawned was fraught with possibilities and uncertainties, and each day found him eager and completely unafraid.

Ashby will be remembered, too, for his brilliant mind. Exceptionally observant and outstanding for his broad and varied interests, his fund of information was almost amazing. He could, if he would, talk easily and well on many different topics. A rapid reader, from childhood he read voraciously, and, the possessor of a remarkable memory, he seldom forgot anything that he had ever read, or ever heard. Throughout his life he was uncommonly alive to those affairs which held the attention of the world. His reactions were positive and, in spite of his impulsive temperament, his judgments on world events were on the whole formed only after long and careful thought. In all things his standards were high, his criticism exacting; and never, when once his feelings were defined, did he hesitate to state and stand by his views—even when silence, as often, might have been the better part of wisdom.

Ashby's vivid and manifold interests prompted in him a wide tolerance and sympathy. He was sincerely fond of people, and intensely loyal, his friends were always his friends.

SENATOR WHITE SAYS MAINE IS NATION'S EASTERN OUTPOST

In a broadcast Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Maine State Society of Washington, Senator Wallace H. White Jr. of Maine outlined the ever increasing part that Maine is playing in the National Defense Program.

"In the development of airports of military usefulness," said the Senator, "the significance of Maine's location could not be ignored. We are today one of the States enjoying the largest measure of attention from the military aviation experts of the country"

The Senator also paid tribute to Governor Sewall and Mr. Gannett, the head of our State Aviation Commission, for their "outstanding contributions to the results accomplished." "Maine is destined to go far in this field of aviation," added the Senator. He called attention to the many types of ships now being built along our coast and to the fact that the total orders placed in Maine for Merchant vessels and naval craft "probably exceed as of this time $250,000,000." In addition to these maritime contributions by our State," he said, "our factories are making boots, snowshoes, woollens, and a considerable number of other articles and things of military value."

In conclusion the Senator spoke of the swiftly changing picture in the European war and of the fact that even should our country at this time avoid involvement "Maine is and must remain the eastern outpost of our continental United States."

JONES—HANSCOM

Miss Dorothy Jean Hanscom became the bride of Robert Haskell Jones of Portland at the Congregational Church Saturday afternoon. Rev. Herbert T. Wallace, pastor of the church, officiated. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Robert D. Hanscom of Ashburnham, Mass.

The bride wore her mother's wedding gown of white organza and lace, fashioned with a train, and the family veil of Brussels lace, and carried an old fashioned shower bouquet.

The bride's sister, Miss Margaret E. Hanscom of Bethel, was maid of honor. She wore a gown of pale pink organza, which was fashioned with a full skirt, short puffed sleeves, and sweetheart neckline. She wore a pink picture hat and carried and old fashioned bouquet of garden flowers.

John B. Brown of Portland was best man. Ushers were E. Deering Noyes of Portland and F. Edward Hanscom of Bethel, brother of the bride.

Mrs. Jones was graduated from Gould Academy and Bates College and for several years has been a member of the Gould Academy faculty. Mr. Jones is a graduate of Portland High School and is associated with an insurance company.

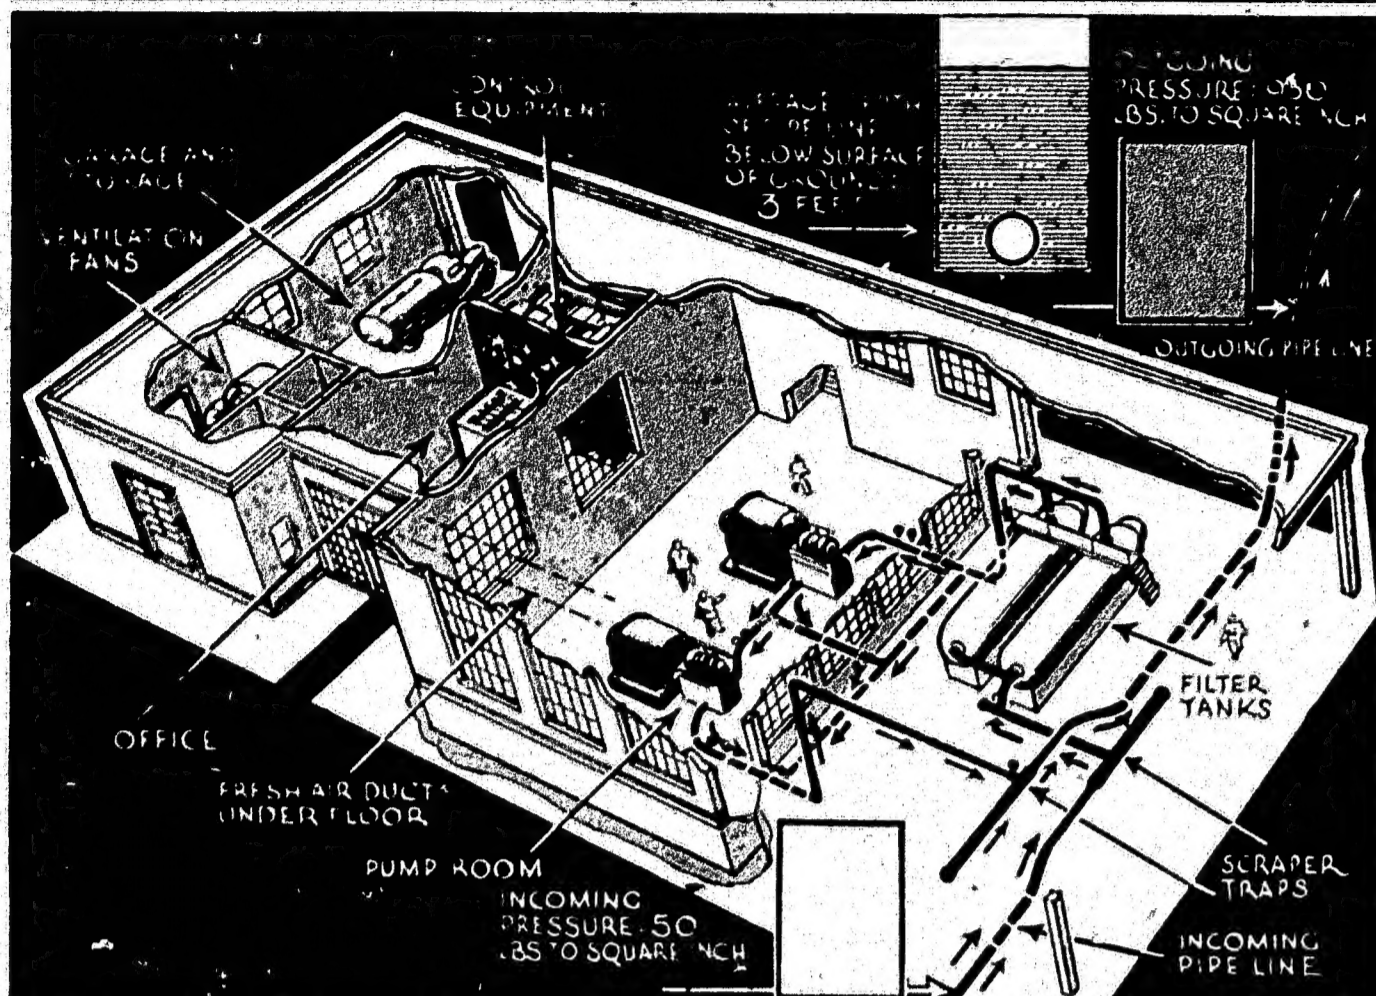

A reception was held at Bethel Inn for the immediate families and a few friends. The bride's traveling costume was a luggage tan and white ensemble with natural and luggage tan accessories. After a wedding trip they will live in Portland.

AN APPRECIATION

The kindness and sympathy shown us by our friends and neighbors, and the well-deserved honors and tributes paid our son and brother make our grief bearable at this time.

Here's How Petroleum is Pumped Through Pipe Lines

This unusual drawing shows a typical pipe line pumping station similar to the 8 stations which will be erected along the 235 mile route of the new Esso pipe line, construction of which the Portland Pipe Line Company has already started between Portland and Montreal. This new line will save sorely pressed tankers many days by permitting them to discharge Montreal bound cargoes at Portland. Work on this new, vital national defense link is being pushed forward rapidly. This "booster station", as it is known to oil men, receives the petroleum from the pipe line at a pressure of approximately 50 pounds per square inch. It puts this same oil through powerful pumps which increase this pressure some 1900 per cent and send it rushing back into the line and along to the next pumping station many miles distant. In this manner the crude oil which will be carried in the new pipe line will be able to dip under river bottoms and climb mountains and hilly New England country. The scraper trap shown in the above drawing is used to catch a device known as a "scraper," which is pushed through the line by the pressure of the petroleum behind it and which cleans out the inside of the pipe. The scraper is caught in this trap and re-inserted in the line to go on its way to the next pumping station.

ATTACK ON AMERICA

BY GENERAL ARVED WHITE
W. H. U. Release

THE STORY SO FAR: More than 200,000 foreign troops secretly assembled in Mexico by Van Hasek suddenly invaded the United States. Vastly superior in numbers and equipment to the American forces which opposed them, Van Hasek's troops pushed relentlessly forward. The U. S. army was not prepared for this sudden attack, and could only retreat in the face of overwhelming force. Expeditionary forces set sail from both the Mediterranean and the Far East. The U. S. Pacific fleet began the long trip around Cape Horn to protect the Atlantic seaboard when the Panama Canal was destroyed by dynamite-laden ships. Aided by a heavy fog, troops from the Orient established bridgeheads on the Pacific Coast. Intelligence Officer Benning was assigned the grim task of reporting developments to his superior, Colonel Flagwill, who was stationed in Washington.

Now continue with the story.

Benning took off to the east in late afternoon. He decided on Boise as the point of vantage from which to observe final developments in the occupation of the Pacific coast. There he would find no difficulty in making his daily wire reports to Flagwill.

Enemy divisions had landed at the mouth of the Columbia River on the Oregon coast, taken the antiquated coast forts from the rear with a few platoons of infantry, and were proceeding up the river toward Portland. A submarine base was reported established at Tongue Point at the mouth of the Columbia.

Other invader divisions had landed on the undefended coast north of San Francisco and were marching into the Sacramento Valley. Van Hasek's Guymas motorized columns had taken Los Angeles and were well north toward San Francisco to effect a junction with their Oriental allies. By tomorrow all coast naval bases would be in the hands of the enemy.

CHAPTER XXI

Each night for a week past, Benning had gone to sleep with a joyous, rhythmic throbbing in his brain, the echo of what to him was a glorious music. It was the music of marching feet and of rolling trains and caissons, music that conjured up visions of a great day yet to come.

What time he could find to himself away from his duties at GHQ of late afternoons, he spent on the roads at the edge of Salt Lake listening to that same refrain as it beat from the heavy field shoes of marching infantry on their way to the westward trains.

A beautiful sight were those bronzed, strong bodies of men who marched with slanted muskets or sat upright in trucks behind their rolling caissons. They showed their long hard months of training, these rugged youngsters; and their faces were gravely radiant with a soldier's high morale as they faced the west at last on the great adventure.

Texas and the Pacific states had suffered unspeakable cruelties and hardships under the heavy heels of the invader. What wealth they had was stripped to the bone, what energies they had were harnessed against their own country to aid their armed oppressors.

There had been those months of a reign of terror when cities within range of the Atlantic were shelled. Bombers rained the country's great cities with death, carrying their assaults in the dark of the night far inland to such cities as Chicago and St. Louis, Cleveland, Detroit, Cincinnati, Indianapolis.

Then had come the Van Hasek demand. President Tannard himself had insisted that Van Hasek be allowed to present to the whole country his terms of peace. Over all the networks, Van Hasek had spoken for the Coalition Powers. Peace could be had at the price of Alaska, Hawaii, the right of unrestricted immigration, renunciation of the Monroe Doctrine, internationalization of the Panama Canal.

Tannard's voice came ringing back now in Benning's memory. An answer to go down in history.

"The United States asks no terms. We mean to destroy the armies that have invaded our shores and then we will hold to an accounting those predatory powers that are responsible for international brigandage. That is our last word to our enemies, until you come before us on your knees in the humility of utter defeat!"

There had been glorious days as well, as the months drifted by. There had been that day of two months ago when the Third Army, reorganized, reinforced, and invincible, crashed down across Texas to drive the invader south of the Rio Grande.

Behind the passes of the Rockies there was formed this great army whose fighting reserves now marched into the west. Long, patient months this had taken, months that had tried the courage and resources of the country.

Benning turned from his reflections to the realities of headquarters. Dusk was falling, the skies were filling with planes, planes that pointed their noses to the west. The vast caravan of men and guns moved on in its endless rhythm as it emptied the huge training camps of the Salt Lake Valley of their half-million men.

At headquarters he checked his personal effects, musette bag, belt and pistol, map-case, field-glasses, raincoat, steel helmet. The buzzer from Flagwill's desk rang at eight o'clock. Flagwill was now a two-star general with the assignment of chief of staff of the western group of field armies.

"Smells to me like a crush note," Flagwill said, sniffing at a small linen envelope and handing it to Benning. "But since it came from Paris in the diplomatic pouch and was shot here from Washington by air courier, it may have some importance."

Benning slit the envelope open with a paper-knife. A message on a single slip of paper, which bore no signature, read:

"Mon Capitaine, I presume you may know already that M. Bravot is in your country under masquerade in the hope of redeeming himself in Van Hasek's favor."

Benning passed the note to General Flagwill and said, with a thoughtful smile: "That note from our little French girl startles me, sir. Rather a coincidence to receive this just when Bravot has been on my mind today. I've had a hunch the fellow might be around somewhere."

Flagwill stood up and took from the pocket of his coat a pair of silver oak leaves. He handed them to Benning and said: "Here's your new insignia of rank. Colonel, with my affectionate best wishes."

Shortly before nine o'clock, Benning wound his way in Flagwill's sedan through the endless troop convoys to the landing-field. In his dispatch case were the secret orders that would put Holling's Fourth Army into the attack. Four planes were lined up at the field to carry as many field-officer couriers with orders that would put the group of four field armies into action.

Benning's pilot, stiff and erect at attention beside his fuselage, saluted punctiliously. In his present preoccupation it was only Benning's long habit of sharp observation that picked up the minor inconsistency of a pilot with goggles fixed over his eyes before he climbed to the cockpit.

As Benning searched the pilot, he saw the officer's body stiffen. Benning's hand drove to his holstered service pistol as he picked out in the moonlight his fellow's profile. The masquerader flashed into action at the same instant. With swift, even deliberation Benning leveled his weapon and pressed the trigger. Bravot sank to the ground.

Pilots and ground crew rushed up. Benning leaned over the fallen man and stripped off the goggles. Floodlights were switched on, a hurried search made for Captain Trench, pilot of the plane. Trench's body was found in the shadow of a near-by hangar, a knife thrust through his heart.

Benning hastily searched Bravot's uniform. In a canvas dispatch case he found cleverly counterfeited orders for a prompt withdrawal of three divisions from an important salient in enemy lines east of Sacramento.

In the small hours of the morning, Benning's plane put him down at Carson City. A military automobile took him north on road Lake Tahoe, thence went into the slopes of the Sierras.

Columns plodded on, silent shadows in the night, an endless caravan of men moving to the front. Daybreak was close at hand when he reached the Fourth Army's advance command post.

The army commander took the dispatch from Benning, broke the seal, and read with a visible tightening of jaws.

"Very good," he said. "This is just what I've been waiting for—my army is itching to jump off."

From the distance heavy artillery grumbled at the dawn, its vibrations tossed from mountain to mountain in a dull, ominous monotone of sound.

In front of them the invader held the superiority of strength in the present moment. But Van Hasek's air force no longer commanded the skies and his espionage system east of the Cascades and Rockies had been snuffed out by firing squads.

Benning worked feverishly to acquaint himself with the intimate details of enemy strength, morale, and dispositions. In five days a million men would be ready to attack. Behind that mighty cavalcade of trained fighting men, another half-million were in the final stages of seasoning for battle, and could be pushed forward when the need for them arrived.

The Fourth Army was shaping itself to attack to the south and west. Whatever the cost, it was to push its way past Sacramento and cut the Van Hasek forces in twain. Simultaneously the First, Second, and Fifth Armies would press forward with a vigor that would prevent Van Hasek from centering his reserves against the Fourth. Upon the advantages of the first few weeks of action would depend the final massed attacks that were aimed to sweep the invader into the Pacific.

Dawn of the day of attack came with a roar of artillery that shook the skies down a three-hundred-mile front. Old-timers vowed that not even the Argonne witnessed such volcanic wrath of artillery. Light, medium, and heavy artillery pounded the Van Hasek trenches for an hour and in its wake came the infantry waves pushing relentlessly ahead in the first red welter of the tortuous miles to the sea.

On a day, after crimson weeks, that Benning flew in reconnaissance over Sacramento, the first American waves were at last on the edge of the city. A heavy pall of smoke told that the invader had abandoned the city in flames, indication that he meant to hold farther to the west rather than trust here to counterattacks. That told Benning, too, that the Van Hasek lines to the north and south would be drawn back.

Benning's pulse surged as he viewed from the skies heavy enemy columns marching to the west from Sacramento to take up some new strategic disposition. The spectacle seemed to vitalize Hague's prophecy, bring nearer the day of fulfillment.

Dark months lay ahead; many, many men yet must die, and the country's stamina would be tested to the last fiber of its strength. But for Benning there were no doubts. The dawn would come, that glorious dawn of the day when he had vowed for himself a glorious adventure.

On that day he meant to wing his way to the north again whence had come those fierce shadows in the fog. There he would see their survivors as they melted back into the Pacific before the mighty vengeance of our massed valor.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

PICTURING PETS

ALMOST everyone—as a pet, and nearly every pet makes an excellent camera subject—if properly handled. Picturing pets does offer a few problems—for most amateur photographers find it difficult to get the pet to pose, or to get sharp focus of a subject that's always on the move.

To pursue our pet with the camera would be a great mistake. The dog or cat naturally becomes excited and runs away, making it impossible to get any pictures. There are several simple remedies—either gently restrict the pet's freedom of movement, pick your spot and tempt him there with a bait of some sort, or select a moment when he is quiet, then avoid any action that may disturb or excite him.

Restriction of movement doesn't mean tying the pet to the nearest tree. And it's true that excellent pictures can be taken when someone is holding a cat in his or her lap, or shaking hands with a dog—these things providing enough restraint to make the subject "stay put." But there are other methods. For example, wait until your dog is in his kennel; post yourself outside with the camera ready for action. Then whistle or make some other sound that will bring him to the door. When he glances inquisitively from the doorway—snap the shutter.

Today's illustration was made in much this same manner. Skippy—leading the usual dog's life—was resting comfortably on the front seat of the car. The camera was carefully focused on the door, and at the call of "Here Skippy," he jumped up to the window sill, and this appealing picture was snapped.

When you use bait—a saucer of milk for the cat or a bone for the dog—the same pre-focusing technique can be used. Or an assistant can be of help, tempting the pet to the desired spot with some choice tidbit. When the dog or cat gets in a good position, the assistant quickly steps aside while the photographer makes the picture.

If your pet has learned some tricks, why not make a series of snaps depicting each of these stunts. Perhaps he has been taught to sit up, roll over, or "speak" before receiving a morsel of candy. Snapshots of these tricks, mounted in your album across the page, will add interest and variety to your collection.

By setting the camera in advance—then calling the dog—this interesting snapshot was made. Pet pictures are easily taken, and they add their full share of interest and variety to your album.

You can take pet pictures with any camera. If you follow the hints mentioned, the subject will assume a natural pose and there will be no movement to stop. Of course, if your dog displays considerable liveliness when rolling over, you will have to use a shutter speed of 1/200 second or faster.

Don't overlook the canary, the parrot, love birds, rabbits, and many other pets found in homes. They all make interesting and appealing pictures and will be excellent additions to your album.

THIS WEEK IN DEFENSE

President Roosevelt informed Congress he had ordered a Navy force to Iceland to "forestall any pincers movement...by Germany against the Western Hemisphere." He said German occupation of that country would threaten the North American continent, shipping in the North Atlantic, and the flow of munitions to Britain. The President said the Navy had been ordered to take "all necessary steps" to insure safety of communications "in the approaches between Iceland and the United States, as well as on the seas between the U. S. and all other strategic outposts."

The President later told his press conference that whether Iceland lies outside the Western Hemisphere is an academic question. He said there are points outside the commonly accepted Hemisphere limits which are of importance to U. S. defense and that in occupying Iceland he acted to forestall a hostile move which strategists considered logical or likely.

Selective Service

Selective Service Headquarters announced that 21-year-olds who registered July 1 will be given draft numbers so they will be called in proportion to previous registrants rather than ahead or after older men. Order numbers will be determined by national lottery on July 17.

Headquarters advised local boards to defer men who have volunteered for civilian or military duty with Canadian or British forces. The House passed legislation to permit deferment of all men who were 28 on July 1.

Alien Education

The President allocated $14,000,000 of WPA funds for a program to educate 1,000,000 aliens in the duties and responsibilities of citizenship. More than 11,000 teachers on WPA rolls will conduct classes for aliens who wish to become citizens.

Registered Civilian Organizations

WPA announced that more than 200,000 national, State and local civilian organizations with 50,000,000 members will be catalogued within the next 60 days to determine the parts the organizations and individuals can play in home defense so the Office of Civilian Defense can find qualified persons for new programs. All except purely social clubs will be indexed.

Civilian Supply

OPM conservation officials announced that "our purchases, our habits, our daily lives, perhaps even our styles will be controlled by the requirements of national defense." Some of the changes facing the public, according to OPM: No corks in bottle tops; beverages in bottles rather than cans; silk used in parachutes will make silk stockings more scarce; women will have fewer permanent waves, cosmetics, and facial creams; it will not be patriotic to buy two automobiles; farmers will choose from 300 instead of 1,400 types of plows; chrome, copper, aluminum and woods such as mahogany will probably not be available to the furniture industry, and many designs will be eliminated.

Buy Coal Now

The Federal Bituminous Coal Consumers' Council appealed to the nation to buy coal now so it can be moved from the mines before growing defense production burdens the country's transportation system. There is an ample supply of coal, the Council said, but by September 15 shortages in some places may develop unless coal is stored for the winter before then.

Prices

Price Administrator Henderson announced that price ceilings on rubber tubes and other rubber products will be deferred for several months to allow the industry time to work out price problems voluntarily. He announced, however, that ceiling prices will be placed within a few days on cottonseed oil and certain grades of West coast lumber used by the Government. Mr. Henderson also stated that recent action to check rises in hide prices does not mean the OPACS expects to freeze livestock or meat prices. Army

The President asked Congress for an additional $4,700,000,000 for the Army, most of it for purchase of heavy guns, $400,000,000 for clothing and other equipment, $200,000,000 for the Air Force and $350,000,000 for the Signal Corps, and $1,000,000 for horses.

The War Department announced formation of a completely motorized, and heavily armed experimental division, strengthened with tanks, with 50 percent more fire power than a present armored division although with 14,000 instead of 15,500 men. The Department also announced that to bolster anti-tank defenses, anti-tank specialists will be assigned to every Army large unit to work out methods of defeating armored force attacks.

Air

OPM announced that during 1941 476 military planes were delivered to the Army, Navy, and Great Britain—142 more than the previous month and a new record. The War Department announced contacts of nearly $200,000,000 for new airplane manufacturing facilities and ordered all Air Corps Reserve Officers except those in key civilian positions to active duty by August 1. The Army Air Force established its own Air Staff to form Air Force plans and decide on equipment and other matters without the approval of the General Staff as heretofore.

Navy

The President asked Congress for $1,625,000,000 in appropriations and contract authority for the Navy for additional ordnance, yard equipment, planes, and repairs, including $400,000,000 for defense installations on naval and private ships—anti-mine equipment, armor, etc., but, the President emphasized, not for guns to arm merchant ships.

Rear Admiral Robinson, Chief of the Navy's Bureau of Ships, announced the Navy shipbuilding program is proceeding so rapidly that "every single combat ship is ahead of schedule." He said the problem of labor supply has been solved and the rate of expansion is limited chiefly by the ability to obtain materials.

Ships

The President asked Congress for $1,698,000,000 for the U. S. Maritime Commission, including $698,000,000 in cash for new ships and $1,298,000,000 in contract authorizations.

announced a saving of more than 500,000 tons of steel in the building of 705 commission-designed ships by construction methods not known in the first World War. The Commission said the greatest single weight saving measure was the introduction of welding to replace riveting so that entire ships are now built without a single rivet.

"I don't think I care to go out with you again.

"Most of last evening was wonderful, Bill. But the drive home spoiled everything.

"You behaved so nicely and acted so considerately up till the minute you got your hands on the wheel and we headed home. Then you suddenly were transformed into what seemed to me a bad-mannered and irresponsible gorilla.

"You yelled at people who had just as much right on the road as you. You disregarded white lines and signs put there for your safety. You scared my wits out by going at an absurd speed.

"That might have been considered smart

"Nor do I want to get in one of those accidents where I am just hurt. I have sense enough to realize that you and the rest of the boys wouldn't be ringing my phone if my face and body were ineptly rearranged by a smash-up in your automobile.

"So I don't think I'll go out with you again, Bill. At least not until you've grown up enough to behave decently as a driver, and not until you realize that you owe a certain responsibility to the person you ask to share your car with you."

WEST BETHEL UNION CHAPEL
Don Fife, Minister
Are you an isolationist in Religion? It is impossible for any one of us to exist alone and really live. Life, from on high, has been given to us to share with others, for it cannot be truly lived,—in isolation. Our religious experiences are personal, yet they are also corporate. Through the fellowship of "sharing," we may lift up others, and be lifted up ourselves, above the ordinary existence to a life that is inwardly strong, and outwardly a worthy manifestation of Christ's principles. This theme: "SHARE IT," will be the topic for morning worship, July 20th, at West Bethel Union Chapel.

Continuing our series of thoughts regarding "true discipleship," three more of the "DEMANDS OF DISCIPLESHIP" will be presented for your appropriation at the 7:30 worship hour.

With the assistance of Miss Ruth Walker, Mrs. Paul Head, Mrs. Kenneth McInnis and Mrs. Carroll Abbott, our Sunday School group is continuing regularly through the summer at the 10 o'clock hour. Your children are welcome!

All of the members of the Sunday School are invited to an afternoon of fun at the Church grounds Tuesday afternoon, July 22nd, at 2:15. Following the games, after the Boys' Club returns from Sango Pond, the young folks will join in a supper prepared for them by the Ladies' Aid Society.

Our choir will meet at 7:30 Friday evening for their rehearsal under the leadership of Mrs. Lovejoy. With Rev. Don Fife as speaker.

DEFENSE BOND QUIZ

Q. What happens if I suddenly need the money I put into a Defense Savings Bond?

A. You can cash your Bond at any time, after 60 days, for the full amount paid, plus any interest due you.

Q. Do many Bond owners cash their Bond?

A. No. People want to help arm America against all attacks. In many cases, people are putting every cent they can spare into Defense Bonds and Stamps. Some are doing this by asking employers or banks to withhold part of their salaries in order to buy these Bonds or Stamps for them.

Note—To purchase Defense Bonds and Stamps, go to the nearest post office or bank, or write for information to the Treasurer of the United States, Washington, D. C.
